NOTES:

- Gold Key published several issues under its Whitman banner; 35 Whitman-branded issues are known, beginning with #20.
- Issues #29, 35, 37 and 45 reprinted issues #1, 4, 5 and 7, respectively. Issues #2-3 were released with photo variant back covers.
- Issue #62 was never published, but the completed script and nineteen lettered, penciled pages can be found online, including the title page.
- Many early issues were published without crediting writers. Len Wein listed his issues in The Monster Times' February 1972 issue, revealing that Dick Wood wrote those preceding his run. The Comic Reader issue #96 (April 1973) noted John Warner's involvement. Paul S. Newman is rumored to have written some issues, but this is unconfirmed. The blog "Who Created the Comic Books?" worked out the missing credits post-Wein, based on anecdotal evidence and styles (martinohearn.blogspot.com/2011/12/gold-key-star-trek-writers.html).
- Sal Trapani was credited at the Grand Comics Database (www.comics.org). Massimo Belardinelli, Giorgio Cambiotti and Mario Pedrazzi also helped Giolitti on art, but their specific issues are unknown. Belardinelli, in an interview for Comic Bits Online, said that for his issues, he drew spacecrafts and Giolitti drew faces. "Who Created the Comic Books?" (martinohearn.blogspot.com/2011/12/unknown-star-trek-artist.html) revealed José Delbo's work on issue #39.
- No credits were listed for the additional stories in the Enterprise Logs collections, but Alden McWilliams' name was mentioned as commander of the UFP Space Academy, making it likely he handled art chores on these tales. The art style is consistent with his work.
- According to "Who Created the Comic Books?" (martinohearn.blogspot.com/2011/10/star-spangled-war-stories-star-trek.html), issue #22 was a sequel to two Gerry Boudreau non-Trek tales in DC Comics' Star-Spangled War Stories issues #170 (June 1973) and 180 (May-June 1974).
- A writer named Doug Mappin claims to have submitted six story concepts to Gold Key in 1979, right after the company lost the license.

DVD-ROM Collection [CANCELED]	(GIT Corp.—would have reprinted the series as PDFs, but never released)

NOTES:

- The strips were published sans credits. Angus Allan wrote several scripts, and Tod Sullivan may have written several as well. Alan Willow painted many of the TV21 covers, while Mike Western produced all but the first two Valiant covers.
- The only stories printed with titles were those in the 1971 and 1973 TV21 annuals, as well as the 1978 Mighty TV Comic annual. All other story titles were created by yours truly for IDW's Star Trek: The Classic UK Comics—The Complete Series reprints.
- TV21 & Joe 90 was renamed TV21 as of issue #37, before the completion of story #13. Many TV21 covers feature painted Star Trek art, or the first page of the Trek strip. The Trek strip expanded to the front page with issue #42. IPC Magazines took over publishing from City Magazines with issue #93. Valiant and TV21 was published without issue numbers.
- The story in the Joe 90 annual was reworked from "The Therovian Quest," a 1965 Doctor Who tale published in TV Comic #684-689.
- The Radio Times strip accompanied an article about artist Frank Bellamy. The one-page strip was based on dialog from TOS episode "The Apple," scripted by Max Ehrlich.
- Both Pocket Books' John J. Ordovery and WildStorm's Jeff Mariotte tried to reprint the series in trade paperback, but Paramount nixed the idea, citing legal concerns. IDW's Library of American Comics imprint is now considering doing the same.
- GIT Corp. intended to produce a DVD-ROM reprinting the strips, but low sales on its other Star Trek titles stalled this project.

NOTES:

- Originally solicited by Fotonovel publisher Mandala Productions. Mandala's president, Laszlo Papas, issued a press release announcing the series in Starlog Vol. 3, Issue #15, in August 1978 (with Papas' first name misspelled as "Lazlo"), which contained six audition strips by Warkentin—a precursor to "Aberration on Abaris." Distributed by the Los Angeles Mirror Press Syndicate, the strip was to have been written and illustrated by Warkentin, who remained with the series when Mandala dropped out. Three additional Warkentin audition strips were unearthed in April 2013 by Rosie Warkentin Ford. All nine audition strips were reprinted in IDW's Star Trek: The Newspaper Comics hardcovers.
- Dick Kulpa's audition strip appeared in Star Trek Communicator #121, February-March 1999, in an article by Rich Handley, titled "Forgotten Frontiers: Revisiting the Star Trek Comic Strips." It was later reprinted in IDW's first hardcover collection.
- Most stories were published without titles, though #3, 7-10, 17 and 19 did have titles printed. The titles to #1, 2 and 4-6 were provided by Rosemary Warkentin from her husband's scripts.
- The title to #12 was revealed in Larry Niven's Playgrounds of the Mind, which discussed the storyline's history. According to that book, Niven and DiVono considered penning a novelization featuring the ending originally planned before Ron Harris quit the strip, but it never materialized. The titles of the remaining seven tales (#11, 13-16, 18 and 20) have been lost to time, so Rich Handley chose new titles for IDW's reprint books while writing an introduction and lexicon for the set.
- Mark Rice is credited with art assists to Warkentin on storylines #4-5. Wendy Yang is credited with art assists to Warkentin on storyline #5, but that was actually Warkentin himself, playing a joke. Ron Harris is credited with art assists to Warkentin on storylines #5-8. Dan Spiegle is credited with art assists to Warkentin on storyline #6. Duke Riley (a pseudonym for Thomas' son, Karl Warkentin) is credited with art assists on storyline #8. Kurt Warkentin (Thomas' other son) is credited with art assists to Warkentin on storyline #8. Paul Chadwick provided art assists to Harris on storylines #9 and 13.
- Thomas Warkentin is credited with art assists to Harris on storyline #10 and 13.
- Serc Soc is credited with art assists to Colon in storyline #17, but this was apparently a pseudonym, true identity unknown. Alfredo Alcalá took over art chores when Colon quit, illustrating half the tale. Terry Robinson, Alan Munro, Carol Lay and Laurie Newell are known to have assisted Harris on art at some point, though their exact contributions are unknown.
- The strips' editor was David Seidman.

- Voyages of the Enterprise, a supplement to Nostalgia World magazine, reprinted the entire Warkentin run and part of the first DiVono-Harris storyline, starting in NW issue #20. Voyages #4-5 were never published, as a factory fire destroyed the artwork for NW #23-26. Since the L.A. Times no longer had the Trek license, new artwork could not be obtained. Thus, only #1-3 and 6-7 exist. Nostalgia World was canceled as of issue #24, preventing any further DiVono-Harris strips from being reprinted.
- The Trib Comic Book, a supplement to The Winnipeg Tribune, published all 41 Sunday pages of the first five Warkentin stories, from Dec. 1, 1979 (Vol. 3, #48) to Sept. 6, 1980 (Vol. 4, #36). The strips omitted panels to fit the book's format, spanned the first five story arcs and ended with a single strip from "Husian Gambit." The Trib Comic Book was published on Saturdays, making it the first appearance of the Star Trek Sunday strips by one day. A few other newspapers published the Sunday comics in comic book format, including the Lake County News-Herald, which printed the entire Sunday run in 152 issues. The Toronto Sun and The Edmonton Sun also published Sunday strips in comic book format, with Star Trek running in 60 and 64 issues, respectively. Trek also appeared in all 75 issues of The Norwich Sunday Bulletin, and in issues of the Kenosha Sunday News.
- The first six story arcs were translated into Spanish and reprinted in six issues of Gunga Din, a magazine published by Editorial Record, in Argentina. The first four of the six arcs were printed in color (their only color appearance anywhere), the last two in black-and-white.
- Each of the first 75 Sunday strips featured a panel designed to be omitted for publication in tab format. Starting on May 10, 1981, the strips were re-formatted so that the Sundays could be published in tab format without losing panels. The omitted panels were not included in IDW's Star Trek: The Newspaper Comics hardcovers.
- Years before IDW's reprint books were released, Pocket Books' John J. Ordovery and WildStorm's Jeff Mariotte tried to reprint the series in trade paperback, but Paramount nixed the idea, citing legal concerns. GIT Corp. also intended to produce a DVD-ROM reprinting the strips, but low sales on its other Star Trek titles stalled this project.

NOTES:

- Peter David's original ending of series 2 issue #12 would have had Kirk tried by the Klingons on Qo'nos—and being found guilty.
- David wrote a tale about Orion pirates for series 2 issues #16-17, titled "First Contact" and "The Long Good-Bye," which Gordon Purcell began illustrating before Paramount's Richard Arnold rejected it. David later recycled the story for Dreadstar #63.
- David also proposed a Chekov time-travel arc featuring the Guardian of Forever and Zaraheth for issues #18-24, titled "Time and a Half for Overtime," which was also nixed. Early working subtitles for issues #18-19 were "Hello I Must Be Going" and "Divine Inspiration." (Source: www.peterdavid.net/bibliography/lost-works.)
- Peter David submitted issue #19's script under the pen-name Robert Bruce Banner, to confirm his suspicions that Richard Arnold was rejecting his scripts as a personal vendetta. Unlike his scripts submitted as Peter David, this one moved through approvals without changes.
- Mark Lenard and Ken Penders pitched The Lessons of Life in 1993. Robert Greenberger and Paramount accepted the proposal, but Alan Gold shelved it after replacing Greenberger. Penders shopped the concept to Malibu, Marvel, Pocket and WildStorm without success, then archived the proposal and sample sketches at kenpenders.com/feature/fpb1.html.
- Steven H. Wilson's "Captain Sulu Adventures" would have been an ongoing feature in the Star Trek Special quarterlies, starting with issue #5, but DC lost the Trek license. The series would have starred Sulu, Saavik, Rand and a new female doctor (Voyager had not yet revealed Tuvok's presence in the crew), and would have built off Saavik's decision to leave the Enterprise in Special #2. Wilson pitched two other stories for issues beyond #5, along with a supporting cast, but editor Margaret Clark rejected nearly all of his proposed characters, other than the doctor. "Natural Enemies" would have revealed the Federation's first encounter with the Cardassians, but without naming them. A fourth Star Trek Special was also planned in the interim, but the title, writer and artist are unknown. "Resolution" would have been a classic TOS story.
- Year One would have been a miniseries set between "Where No Man Has Gone Before" and "The Corbomite Maneuver," while his "Elseworlds" tale would have featured a Vulcan on which Surak's reformation never occurred and Spock was a warlord. Year One was proposed to Margaret Clark, but was not greenlighted because DC's license was coming to an end. Wilson no longer recalls if Clark read the "Elseworlds" pitch.

Title unknown [CANCELED] (w: David DeVries and Glenn Lumsden, a: unknown)

NOTE:

- Editor Kim Yale commissioned comics from Mangels and DeVries, but DC dropped these projects after Yale succumbed to illness. Mangels' tale would have been a sequel to "Wolf in the Fold," featuring Redjac, while DeVries' and Lumsden's story would have been Klingon-centric.
- Mark Lenard's The Lessons of Life would have been a tie-in to A.C. Crispin's novel Sarek.

NOTES:

- Star Trekker* was published in a 1991 Japanese fanzine, Dengeki, then as a Japanese comic, Star Trek: The Manga Parody. American publisher Ben Dunn reprinted all 166 pages as an English trade paperback, Star Trekker. He then learned Atelier Lana had additional material and reprinted it as a monthly series, Star Trekker 2, which was canceled after two issues when Paramount issued a cease-and-desist letter. Though officially deemed a parody to avoid copyright-infringement claims, Star Trekker used actual terminology and names from Star Trek, as though it were part of that universe and not a satire.

(EagleMoss, will reprint various issues, to be determined)

NOTES:

- Shinsei Shinsei was published with three variant covers.
- Uchu's early title was Aratanaru Michi He ("To a New Path").
- Star Trek: The Manga—Ultimate Edition was originally titled Kanzenban ("omnibus" or "collection"), and was originally solicited as a hardcover but was ultimately produced in softcover format.
- In 2004, Tokyopop announced a second TNG manga containing a "creepy space spider story" by Mike Barr, a "holodeck story with Worf in feudal Japan" by Jake Forbes, a "Q story where he's split into three personalities" by Chris Dows, a "Klingon battle story" by Jim Alexander titled "Skin Deep," and a Mirror Universe tale by Mark Paniccia. However, the company opted to produce another TOS digest instead.
- GIT Corp. intended to produce a DVD-ROM reprinting the mangas, but low sales on its other Star Trek titles stalled this project.

DVD-ROM Collection [CANCELED]

Star Trek: The Graphic Novel Collection

(GIT Corp. had planned to reprint the entire IDW run as PDFs if IDW ever dropped the Star Trek license, but this is no longer likely)

(EagleMoss, will reprint various issues, to be determined)

NOTES:

- Almost all of IDW's issues have been published with multiple variant covers.
- Issue #1 of Klingons—Blood Will Tell was also published with a Klingon-language variant.
- The individual issue titles of Blood Will Tell were omitted from the printed copies, but were revealed in an online forum.
- Issue #6 of The Space Between contains the title of #5 ("Space Seeds"); the correct title appears in the omnibus edition.
- The story in the Focus On...Star Trek special was titled "Captain's Personal Log" on the last page of the story, but "Captain's Log: Supplemental" on the index page and in an introduction.
- New Frontier: Turnaround, Year Four: The Enterprise Experiment, Assignment: Earth and Mirror Images were announced under the general title Star Trek: Second Stage, though that mantle only appeared on the first New Frontier issue. The press release listed Chris Ryall as the writer of Mirror Images (the Tiptons ultimately penned that series) and suggested a second TNG-focused Mirror Images miniseries would follow, written by Andrew Steven Harris and George Strayton, which instead evolved into the Myriad Universes miniseries.

- The original title of New Frontier: Turnaround was Slingshot.
- The titles to issues #13-14 and #17-19 of the Abrams monthly series appeared in the trade paperbacks. Issue #24 was named at ComicVine.com. Issue #13's title was alternatively given as "The Redshirt's Tale" in IDW solicitations and "Life of Cupcake" on Mike Johnson's Twitter page.
- The cover of DS9: Fool's Gold simply called the series Deep Space Nine. The "Fool's Gold" subtitle appeared at the contents page's bottom.
- The Best of Peter David reprint edition was previewed online at Apple's iTunes Store in 2009.
- Infestation was a crossover with Ghostbusters, Transformers, G.I. Joe, Zombies Vs. Robots and CVO: Covert Vampiric Operations.
- Flesh and Stone was inspired by a competition held by XPRIZE to develop a consumer-friendly mobile device capable of diagnosing and interpreting a set of health conditions and vital health metrics.
- The intended Deep Space Nine/Doctor Who crossover, proposed in March 2013, was canceled after IDW lost the Doctor Who license. Tony Lee posted the proposal on his Facebook page on May 12, 2015 (<https://www.facebook.com/mrtonylee/posts/10152862440578870>).
- The first issue of New Visions (The Mirror, Cracked) was cited in Diamond's October 2014 catalog under the titles Core.
- GIT Corp. intended to produce a DVD-ROM reprinting all of IDW's issues once the company eventually ceased publishing Star Trek comics, but low sales on GIT's other Trek titles stalled this project.
- The Primate Directive will be published as a crossover with BOOM! Studios' Planet of the Apes line.
- IDW offered "Humble Star Trek Bundles" in 2014 and 2015 to support the Hero Initiative, consisting of PDFs of numerous Trek titles.
- The Starfleet Academy ashcan was distributed to fans at New York Comic-Con 2015.
- New Visions: More the Serpent Than the Dove was sold exclusively via IDW's Humble Bundle plan, to raise money for charity.
